4. Met with [ ] and [ ] of OCR. They had wanted to discuss with us possible congressional implications concerning a publication put out by the Library of Congress at our instance. It is a calendar of events of all international organizations. James was concerned because there are a number of Communist front organizations listed in the publication. He does not know whether the Library is aware of this and was somewhat concerned that a Committee such as the House Committee on Un-American Activities might create some problems if they came across this fact. James was advised that we saw no need to approach congressional committees on this, that we saw no legal complications, but our office might consider the desirability of alerting the Library of Congress to this. The Library might then decide to place an appropriate caveat or flyleaf in the publication. 25X1
